

2000 Idaho Public Water System Annual Compliance Report

Purpose of the Report

The purpose of the report is to inform the public of the violations of the national primary drinking water regulations by public water systems (PWS) in Idaho for the period of January 1, 2000 through December 31, 2000. The report defines the quality and safety of drinking water in our state. The Idaho Public Water System Annual Compliance Report is also a requirement of the 1996 Amendments to the federal Safe Drinking Water Act as outlined in Section 1414 (c)(3)(A)(I).

Drinking Water in Idaho

In Idaho, there are 2,077 regulated public drinking water systems serving 1,084,336 people. Approximately 95% of the state's drinking water comes from groundwater. The remaining 5% is supplied through surface water such as streams, rivers, reservoirs, and springs.

Overall, Idaho's drinking water is quite safe, however, local contamination is being discovered in some of the state's groundwater sources. Idaho's surface water sources are also continually subject to natural and human sources of microbial contamination.

Most of Idaho's surface waters are of good to high quality because of their origin in natural watersheds of the state's national forests. As a result, chemical contamination is not usually a concern, but naturally occurring pathogens such as giardia and cryptosporidium are commonly found in surface water. In parts of Idaho, surface water may also be subject to contamination from agricultural runoff that includes sediment, pesticides, fertilizers, microbial contaminants, and nutrients.

Idaho water purveyors and the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) continue to strive for safe drinking water for the consumers of the state. The statistics for 2000 show an improvement in compliance in Idaho over 1999. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Safe Drinking Water Information System (SDWIS) reports, for 2000, 31% fewer violations than in 1999.

Federal Safe Drinking Water Program

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) established the Public Water System Supervision (PWSS) Program under the authority of the 1974 Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA).

The SDWA allows states to administer their own PWSS programs, and the authority to run the program is called "primacy." To receive primacy, states must meet certain requirements laid out in the SDWA and the federal regulations, including the adoption of drinking water regulations that are at least as stringent as the federal regulations and a demonstration that they can enforce the program requirements. In 1978, EPA awarded Idaho primacy. The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is now charged with the responsibility of program administration.

Under the provisions of the SDWA and the 1986 and 1996 Amendments, EPA sets national limits on contaminant levels in drinking water to ensure that the water is safe for human consumption. These limits are known as maximum contaminant levels (MCLs). For some regulations, however, EPA establishes treatment techniques in place of an MCL to control unacceptable levels of contaminants in water.

The EPA also sets standards on how often public water systems must monitor their water for contaminants and when to report the monitoring results to the states.

Additionally, EPA requires PWSs to monitor for unregulated contaminants to provide data for future regulatory development. Finally, EPA requires PWSs to notify the public when the systems have violated these regulations.

The above federal standards for MCLs, treatment techniques, and monitoring requirements are, in turn, adopted as state standards.

Public Drinking Water Systems Defined

Public Water Systems

A Public Water System (PWS) is a system for the provision of water to the public for human consumption through pipes or other constructed conveyances, if such system has at least 15 service connections or regularly serves at least 25 individuals at least 60 days out of the year. A public water system can be one of three types:

- Community Systems (CWS) serve at least 15 service connections or 25 people year-round in their primary residences.
- Non-transient Non-community Systems (NTNCWS) serve at least 25 of the same persons over six months per year (e.g., schools, or hospitals that have their own water source).
- Transient Non-community Systems (TNCWS) serve at least 25 persons (but not the same 25) over six months per year (e.g., campgrounds or highway rest stops that have their own water source).

In Idaho, there are 2,077 regulated public drinking water systems: 741 are community water systems (CWS), 260 are non-transient non-community systems (NTNCWS), and 1,076 are transient non-community systems (TNCWS).

State Program Provides Technical Assistance to Systems

The DEQ provides, in cooperation with the state's seven district health departments, a variety of services to public water systems. For example, DEQ works with systems to ensure compliance with minimum state requirements, conducts sampling surveys and on-site visits to prevent public health problems, reviews water system plans and specifications, conducts training sessions, holds public information meetings, loans specialized monitoring equipment, publishes informational bulletins and the quarterly Idaho Drinking Water Newsletter, contracts for statewide operator training classes, distributes a technical assistance notebook to all systems, and issues monitoring waivers. DEQ tracks these services to maintain a record of technical assistance provided to the state's 2,077 public water systems.

Not only does the state provide localized technical assistance to systems (see above), but it also provides assistance to systems through state programs to improve compliance:

- Drinking Water State Revolving Fund (SRF). The 1996 Amendments created the SRF loan program to enable states to help water systems finance infrastructure improvements that are needed to solve compliance and public health concerns. In 2000, Idaho provided $2.3 million in loans to drinking water systems.

- Capacity Development. DEQ hired a full-time Capacity Development Coordinator to administer and implement the state's Capacity Development Strategy, developed pursuant to Section 1420(c) of the Safe Drinking Water Act. The objective of the strategy is to improve the financial, technical, and managerial capabilities of water systems that are selected and prioritized in accordance with the Capacity Development Strategy for the state of Idaho.
- Water System Operator Certification. Operator certification in Idaho became mandatory in April 2000. Operators previously not certified, have until April 15, 2002 to comply with the new rule. Operator competency is critical to the protection of public health and maintenance of safe, effective, and reliable water treatment plants and distribution lines. DEQ is now implementing its EPA-approved Drinking Water Certification Program based on the state's nationally recognized voluntary program that has been in place for years.
- Source Water Protection. The first step in a multiple barrier approach to drinking water protection is preventing contamination of drinking water sources. DEQ is currently performing source water assessments in accordance with an EPA-approved prioritization schedule. As source water assessments are completed for public water systems, DEQ, in cooperation with the Idaho Rural Water Association and other entities, is following up with source water protection assistance to interested communities.

Idaho's Out-of-Compliance Systems Fall into Five General Categories

1. Violations due to frequent small system operator turnover. Frequent turnover in small system operators and poor record keeping contribute to an ongoing loss of institutional memory about monitoring requirements. To help solve this problem, DEQ and the state's seven health districts provide frequent and extensive training opportunities that include bacteriological monitoring techniques and frequencies. For a water system with a contamination detection, DEQ offers one-on-one assistance to identify the problem and to help with the more complicated follow-up monitoring requirements.

2. Violations due to the complexity of chemical monitoring. Chemical monitoring requirements are much more complex than bacterial monitoring requirements. Currently, monitoring is required for 82 different regulated chemical contaminants.

A variety of factors can affect the monitoring deadlines for chemical contaminants in different ways. For example, the selection of the sampling collection point depends on the specific contaminant and, in some cases, on other risk factors that the water system must determine. Because of the complexity of the regulations, Idaho strives to ensure that public water systems are informed about the type of monitoring required and when it is to be performed.

Note: In an effort to reduce monitoring and reporting violations, DEQ has automated the monitoring schedule and notifies systems annually of the reporting requirements. DEQ's automated system is temporarily out of commission due to migration to a new information system.

3. Violations due to inadequate financial capacity to correct contaminant or supply problems. Some violations are due to inadequate treatment resulting from the financial inability to implement the treatment requirements. Treatment violations are typical of public water systems that serve small populations but have extensive and costly water treatment needs. A good example is a water system that serves around 30 homes, but is required to install filtration because it draws water from a surface water body. Small water systems of this type may need to spend several thousand dollars per person served to bring the water quality up to acceptable standards for public water systems.

The 1996 Amendments to the Safe Drinking Water Act provided for a low interest revolving loan fund to help small water systems facing difficulties. Although this fund does not offer a solution to every financial problem, it will go a long way toward helping some of the water systems with the greatest need. DEQ lowered the interest to 2% for installation of required treatment. The state awarded the first loans in 1998, and continues to do so on an annual basis (see Drinking Water State Revolving Fund, page 2).

The Amendments also offer incentives to states to develop programs to help water systems develop the managerial, technical, and financial capabilities to solve their own problems. The DEQ is presently implementing a strategy for providing this type of assistance to public water systems (see Capacity Development, page 3).

4. Violations that occur due to neglect or refusal to follow state regulations. When financial limitations are not a factor and DEQ has explained a particular contaminant problem, continued violation by a water system is often due to continued neglect, or in some cases, due to a refusal to conduct required monitoring. Formal enforcement becomes the appropriate action in such cases.

5. Violations that are false due to poor data quality. DEQ's intensification of data quality assurance and enforcement efforts has been successful in reducing the number of systems incorrectly identified as significant non-compliers. Further improvement in our data quality may be achieved by upgrading our aging data management system. The upgrade is expected to be completed in 2001.

Variances and Exemptions

To date, Idaho has not granted any variances and exemptions as allowed by federal regulations.

Enforcement

Idaho responds to reported violations by offering technical assistance to resolve the water system's problem. If offers of assistance are ignored, then the next step is a series of escalated compliance letters followed by formal enforcement action if all else fails. Formal enforcement actions usually carry a monetary penalty with provisions for a larger penalty if violations continue. In 2000, DEQ issued 18 Notices of Violations and 19 Consent Orders.

The primary objective of every enforcement action, however, is to bring the system back into compliance with the state and federal drinking water regulations to protect public health. The state's DWIMS Report 5.2b lists system violations for 2000 (see Attachment #1 in full report). SDWIS, however, reports bacteriological violations and systems that have returned to bacteriological compliance.

Public Water System Violations for 2000

Violations for 2000 - Database - 06/04/2001

Violations Category	MCL		Treatment Technique		Significant Monitoring
	Violations	Systems in Violation	Violations	Systems in Violations	Violations	Systems in Violations

Surface Water Treatment Rule			299	22	0	0
Lead and Copper Rule			0	0	16	16

Total Number of Systems in Violation	573
Total Number of Violations	1,147

* The state was not able to report chemical violations due to the changeover from the state's DWIMS database to SDWIS.

Definition of Terms Used in the Above Violations Chart

- MCLs. Under SDWA, the EPA sets national limits on contaminant levels in drinking water to ensure that the water is safe for human consumption. These limits are known as maximum contaminant levels (MCLs).
- Treatment Techniques. For some SDWA regulations, the EPA establishes treatment techniques in place of an MCL to control unacceptable levels of certain contaminants. For example, there are treatment techniques for viruses, bacteria, and turbidity.
- Significant Monitoring/Reporting. For this report, significant monitoring violations are defined as any major monitoring violation that occurred during a specified report interval. A major monitoring violation (except for the Surface Water Treatment Rule) occurs when no samples are taken or no results are reported during a compliance period. A major monitoring/reporting violation of the Surface Water Treatment Rule occurs when fewer than 10% of the required samples are taken or no results are reported during a reporting interval. A minor violation occurs when some but not all of the required numbers of samples are taken.

Note: Information for RADs, VOCs, SOCs, IOCs, and Lead/Copper is expected to be available following the upgrade of the state's data management system.

Summary

Compared to 1999, the total number of public water system violations declined by 31% in 2000 (from 1,362 to 1,147). The majority of these violations were reported by “very small” systems (those systems serving a population of 500 or less).

Seventy-two percent (72%) of all public water systems reported no violations of any kind.

Of the 1,147 violations reported for 2000, 52% of these were for failure to either conduct or report specified monitoring activities. Twenty-six percent (26%) were for treatment technique violations. Twenty-two percent (22%) were for Total Coliform Rule MCL violations where a contaminant was detected in a drinking water sample at a level above the MCL.

When acute MCL violations are discovered, DEQ (in conjunction with the state's seven district health departments) provides immediate assistance to the water system to help ensure that the public has adequate information about what precautions may be necessary, such as boiling water or using bottled water. DEQ assists with the lesser violations by providing information about what is necessary to return to compliance.

In Idaho, bacteriological contamination is more common than chemical contamination. When bacteriological contamination is found, DEQ assists in determining the cause and the necessary corrective measures. Most Idaho chemical contamination occurrences are low enough in concentration and short enough in duration that the problem is corrected before a violation actually occurs. The exception to this rule occurs when nitrate or nitrite exceeds the established standards.

Idaho is constantly working to find new and better ways to ensure safe drinking water. The program not only offers information to keep the 2,077 public water systems informed of monitoring requirements, it provides technical assistance when contamination is found and offers help for systems that want to invest in preventive measures.

The Idaho Drinking Water Program remains committed to maintaining the high quality and safety of drinking water that the state presently enjoys

To locate a particular drinking water system on the Annual Violations Report that follows:

Systems are listed first by their Public Water System number (PWS #) by county. If you do not know the PWS # of the system you are interested in, use the key chart on the next page (A-2) to locate, (1) first the county in which the system is located, and then (2) within each county list, find the system in the alphabetical list.

For example, to find the Aspen Apartments in Ada County, go to the chart on A-2, find Ada County and its corresponding 3-digit number (which is 401). Then on the Annual Violations and Enforcement Report list, find the “401s” and look for the system name which will be listed alphabetically.

Note on data used in this report: The data included in this report covers the 2000 calendar year, and therefore, some information may no longer apply to current system conditions. For example, a system that was in violation in the year 2000 may no longer be in violation in 2001. Any decisions based on the automated information contained in this report should be verified in detail.

If, as a consumer, you have any questions about a particular public water system, contact the water system itself or the Department of Environmental Quality regional office or district health department that has jurisdiction over the system.

Addresses and telephone numbers for the six DEQ regional offices and the seven district health departments are located on page 7 of the narrative portion of this report entitled “2000 Idaho Public Water System Annual Compliance Report.”

Note: In the column entitled “Type” of the Violations and Enforcement Report, the keys to the numbers in that column are listed below.

Type
03 - Regular Monitoring
21 - Acute Violation
